You may have received an email alert earlier today about documents that were posted concerning the former Exide facility in Vernon. You received that alert because you subscribe to DTSC's notification system for Exide. The document titled "Information about Exide Technologies' Expanded Area Sampling" has been removed from DTSC's website, and this email explains why.

The document was originally posted last week before the July 23rd Community Advisory Committee meeting. The Department removed the document because it summarizes information in a way that caused concern within the community during that meeting. The Department is currently working to address those concerns.

We apologize for any confusion this may have caused.
